On Toesday the case of Toney Griswald, indicted for moraler, was called and a jury impaineled. This case has attracted much attention during the trial, and resulted on Thursday in the discharge of the prisoner. The accessed was indicted for the murder of his brother, some time ago, near Camp Grant. The evidence was positive that with but little or no provocation he shot his brother in cold blood, but upon an investigation of the case it became evidents evident of the man of them is an old offender and the evidence of the accused showed that one of the prosecuting stineses committed the deed, and had upon several previous occasions proposed to him and brother to engage in theft and robbery. The evidence was considered sufficiently strong against Charles Grum and Charles Trickner to cause their arrest for the murder. Mr Streeter, who defended Griswald, is deserving of credit for the zeal, energy and ability he displayed in his behalf. It seems to be the general belief that the verdict in this case was just, but there are two things we do not undarstand. If Grum and Trickner had repeatedly proposed to the Griswald brothers to engage in crime, why did they centime to live with thom? After Griswald was murdered why did his brother allow weeks and weeks to pass without causing the arrest of those he knew to be his brother's murderers t—[Turson Citizen, April 4th. April 4th.
